<http://www.bartleby.com/> This is a tried and true site.

<http://www.bookwolf.com/> This site contains free notes.

<http://mrssmoke.onsugar.com/45-Websites-Students-Create-Original-Artwork-Online-3442983> Lots of things to look at that I haven't tried thoroughly. I have used several that are really cool. I'll let you peruse on your own.

<http://play.magneticpoetry.com/poem/Original/kit/> In case your fridge door is reserved for something else, make magnetic poetry here.

<https://eduhowto.wordpress.com/2011/01/06/14-student-favorite-project-websites/> Many good sites here.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ygGU8A0oFIQ> This is a hilarious site although you need to be advised that it has the edge (and language) of late night TV. Her one-woman performances of many characters and her sizzling parody and satire on nearly everything in society is addictive. I first found her several years ago making fun of teenage excuses for not doing school work and educational things, so I wanted my students to see her. Please know you can click right out of anything that offends. There are some clean and clever ones though.
